EAGLESON RE-ELECTED SCHOOL HEAD

FOUR CONVICTS "IN SOLITARY" AFTER BREAK

Mansfield Streets Turned To Battle Front When Prisoners Try Escape.

MANSFIELD, O., May 14—Four "long-term" Ohio State Penitentiary prisoners, part of a truckload of 57 convicts who were being transferred to the Ohio State Reformatory here are in solitary confinement at the reformatory today as the result of their daring attempt at escape in downtown Mansfield yesterday afternoon when a number of shots were fired.

Picking the locks on the handcuffs which had fastened them together, the four, including the somewhat notorious motorious Fred Kellogg, 31, the alleged leader in the famous Junction City Brick plant delivery, jumped from the truck and made a short-lived dash for freedom.

CIRCUS CROWD

Penitentiary guards and national guardsmen fired at the fleeing prisoners but they soon had to hold their bullets in check because of the unusually heavy crowds on downtown streets, which had been attracted there by a circus.

The guards gave chase and the men were rounded up in a few minutes. One had run into a blind alley and trapped himself. A second jumped through the window of the First Methodist Episcopal Church and was captured inside. The other two failed in their foot race with guardsmen.

The prisoners were part of a consignment from the Ohio State Penitentiary where overcrowded conditions following the Easter Monday night fire in which 320 convicts perished, forced the transfer.

Mansfield Reformatory is filled to capacity, not only with its own prisoners but with approximately 300 convicts from the penitentiary. Fifty one penitentiary convicts, who were described as well-behaved, were sent back to the penitentiary early yesterday to make room for the consignment in the afternoon.

KELLOGG IS ONE

Those who attempted to escape are:

Fred Kellogg, 31, who is serving a 10 to 20 year sentence for manslaughter, which resulted from his conviction of killing Guard Weakly in a prison break at Junction City, where the guard was shot and killed when he had taken Kellogg and three other convicts to a dentist's office. Kellogg has a long record.

Clyde Fittro, 26, who is serving 20 to 30 years for robbery. He was admitted from Summit-co.

Frank Allison, 20, who is serving 10 to 25 years from Lucas-co for robbery.

Frank Sanders, 23, serving 12 to 25 years from Summitt-co for robbery.

TURNER FAILS TO SET MARK

Transcontinental Speed Record of Lindbergh Still Better By Hour.

NEW YORK, May 14—Captain Roscoe Turner was undecided today where he would again attempt to set a new transcontinental airplane record. An announcement on his decision was expected later today.

Captain Turner arrived here last night from Los Angeles nearly an hour behind the record coast-to-coast flight of 14 hours, 23 minutes and 27 seconds of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. He was out of gas when he reached Curtiss Wright Airport at Valley Stream, Long Island, and the plane went into a ground loop but the flyer, as well as his lion cub mascot, escaped injury.

The aviator said he encountered bad weather in the midwest and New Mexico and the strong head winds interfered with his race against time.

Turner followed the tactics of Lindbergh and flew at great height, maintaining an average altitude of about 12,000 feet.

PROHIBITION RETURNS TO SENATE HALL

Debates Over Transfer to Justice Department To Take Three Days.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, May 14 — The Prohibition war came back to the Senate after a month's vacation today when that body began consideration of President Hoover's plan for transferring prohibition enforcement to the Department of Justice.

There was but little opposition to the transfer features of the bill already passed by the House. Both wets and drys, however, were exercised of the control of industrial alcohol and the permit system.

PREPARE CHANGES

Senator Tydings (D) of Md. prominent wet, prepared a handful of amendments, seeking to change the provisions by the President and his Law Enforcement Commission. One of the Tyding amendments would completely revise the president's plan for dividing control over industrial alcohol permits between the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury.

Tydings proposed retention of the alcohol permit control in the Treasury Department, but he would give the Attorney General power to veto any and all permits. His substitute plan provides if the Attorney General possess "information of such character" as to indicate a permit should not be granted, the filing of his protest with the treasury department would prevent issuance of the permit. In event the Attorney General received such information after a permit was issued, the Treasury Department would be directed to initiate revocation proceedings against the permit-holder.

Another interesting feature of the debate will revolve around an amendment, proposed by Senator Hayden (D) of Ariz., establishing a new and unified United States Border Patrol in the Department of Justice. All the personnel of the present border patrols, operated by the Labor Department, the Immigration Bureau and the Customs Bureau of the Treasury, would be transferred into the Department of Justice and the old units discontinued.

BORDER PATROL

The proposed border patrol would have power first to enforce the prohibition laws against rum smugglers across the Canadian and Mexican borders. In addition, the patrolmen would be empowered to enforce all immigration laws, labor regulations and the customs laws. Hayden declared his plan would end confusion in the ranks of the various existing border patrols.

Administration leaders expected the debate to last several days, not because of the opposition to the bill, but because the subject of prohibition usually provokes lengthly talk. Both wets and drys have been silent in the Senate for a month and the debate undoubtedly will cover all phases of prohibition enforcement, aside from the merits of the proposed transfer.

The Graf Zeppelin will start on its sixth trans-Atlantic trip. The United States, focal point of the German airship's former crossings, will be neglected on the sixth, as the big Zeppelin will fly for South America, while the dirigible R-100 in its flight to Canada may determine whether England will carry out its plan of establishing a fleet of dirigibles linking the far-flung units of the empire by air. Major G. H. Scott will be the skipper of the R-100 on its first oceanic crossing.

THURSDAY IS CIRCUS DAY

Robbins Bros. To Parade Shortly Before Noon—To Come On Pennsy.

Smiling skies, roaring lions, and trumpeting elephants are on schedule to appear Thursday in Circleville. For May 15th, Robbins Bros. circus, coming out of the West, will arrive on the Pennsylvania Railroad to put on two performances here. The afternoon show will be at 2 p. m. and the evening show at 8 p. m.

Robbins Bros. circus is reputed to be one of the largest in the country. Contracts for hay, water and meat for the animals, and meals for the troupers themselves have already been made.

The company has promised an old time street parade late in the morning. Not to mention the clowns, horses, ponies, camels and elephants, there will be the famous Miss Iowa, the hippopotamus which tips the scales at 10,000 pounds. She consumes 100 pounds of food daily.

Another attraction in the fourring circus will be Big Bingo, the largest elephant in the world. His appearance in the street parade, depends on the weather, because he doesn't like windy weather. It is hoped that a sudden breeze doesn't strike him as he reaches Main and Court-sts, for he is the largest brute that walks the face of the earth.

All of these featured animals are additional to the rhinos, hippos, camels, tigers, lions, yaks, xebues, kangaroos, polar bears and many others.

Robbins Bros. show still clings to the tradition of circus day, and will have the largest street parade in the world. There will be over 200 acts, with 1,000 people, 4,000 wild animals, and 200 trained horses.

The train of many cars will arrive at the S. Scioto-st crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad before day break Thursday. The parade will be staged at about 11 a. m.

Mrs. Robert Denman who submitted to an operation last week at White Cross hospital Columbus, is reported to be improving satisfactorily.

BROKEN PRINCIPAL IN HORST CASE NOW SEEMS WELL-TO-DO

Charles Hannah Buys Boy Bicycle With Roll "Big Enough To Choke a Cow"—Moves With Family To Cleveland Although He Doesn't Work.

WOOSTER, O., May 14— "To what do you owe your success?"

Wayne-co authorities would like to know the answer to this question from Charles Hannah, who not so long ago was one of the principals in Ohio's most baffling case—the Melvin Horst mystery.

Two or three months ago, Hannah was reputedly as "poor as Job's turkey"—so poor, in fact, that newspapermen aided in the support of his family while he was being held in jail in connection with the disappearance of four-year-old Melvin Horst from Orrville, December 27, 1928.

Today Hannah is apparently well-to-do, enough so that he bought a bicycle for his son, Junior, and still had plenty with which to move to Cleveland.

What is the source of this mysterous wealth, Wayne-co authorities want to know, which Hannah has apparently inherited since indictments charging him with murder and child stealing in connection with the Horst case were nolled and he was released last April 4 from the county jail?

"Hannah hasn't done a lick of work since he got out of jail," according to Deputy Sheriff John Kiener, "But he seems to have plenty of money."

Before he became implicated in the Horst case, Hannah worked in a local bakery at $14 per week.

Since his release from jail and the entanglements of the Horst case. Hannah has been living at his home here with his wife and their son, Junior, and Mrs. Hannah's 82-year-old mother.

The curiosity of Wayne-co officials as to Hannah's mysterious wealth was first aroused several weeks ago when the man and his son walked into a store here and purchased a bicycle for the boy. A roll of bills from which Hannah paid for the bicycle was described by the proprietor of the store as "big enough to choke a horse."

That Hannah and his family have moved to Cleveland was revealed when John Shanklin, who owns the house in which Hannah lived, went to collect the rent. Hannah and his family were gone. It was later learned that Hannah had moved to Cleveland, where he "had a job or something," according to authorities.

DALLAS, Texas, May 14 — An Ecclesiastrical trial of Bishop James Cannon, Jr. appeared certain today following the filing of formal charges of alleged stock market speculation against the Virginia Prelate before the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session here.

The laymen were led by Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C. former secretary of the Navy under Woodrow Wilson, and G. T. Fitzhugh, Memphis, Tenn., attorney.

The charges were believed based on evidence held by Fitzhugh who had been expected for several days to bring a formal complaint against Bishop Cannon.

Cleveland Officials Begin Vigorous Fight to Oust Mint-Vending Machines

CLEVELAND, May 14— A vigorous drive to rid the city of all mint-vending slot machines was begun by police here today following a court ruling which branded the devices as gambling schemes.

Judge Fred H. Wolf, sitting in common pleas court late yesterday, dismissed a suit in which Walter Mattias, slot machine distributor, sought to enjoin police from interference with, siezure and destruction of slot machines owned by him.

Judge Wolf declared that slot machines and other such devices are gambling machines whether they are used for actual profit in cash or trade to customers.

Answering the contention that the machines are "amusement devices," Judge Wolf commented that since some people gain amusement by playing the machines, they were gambling on the amount of amusement that could be derived every time they inserted a coin.

FOUR CONVICTS "IN SOLITARY" AFTER BREAK

Mansfield Streets Turned To Battle Front When Prisoners Try Escape.

MANSFIELD, O., May 14—Four "long-term" Ohio State Penitentiary prisoners, part of a truckload of 57 convicts who were being transferred to the Ohio State Reformatory here are in solitary confinement at the reformatory today as the result of their daring attempt at escape in downtown Mansfield yesterday afternoon when a number of shots were fired.

Picking the locks on the handcuffs which had fastened them together, the four, including the somewhat notorious motorious Fred Kellogg, 31, the alleged leader in the famous Junction City Brick plant delivery, jumped from the truck and made a short-lived dash for freedom.

CIRCUS CROWD

Penitentiary guards and national guardsmen fired at the fleeing prisoners but they soon had to hold their bullets in check because of the unusually heavy crowds on downtown streets, which had been attracted there by a circus.

The guards gave chase and the men were rounded up in a few minutes. One had run into a blind alley and trapped himself. A second jumped through the window of the First Methodist Episcopal Church and was captured inside. The other two failed in their foot race with guardsmen.

The prisoners were part of a consignment from the Ohio State Penitentiary where overcrowded conditions following the Easter Monday night fire in which 320 convicts perished, forced the transfer.

PROHIBITION RETURNS TO SENATE HALL

Debates Over Transfer to Justice Department To Take Three Days.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, May 14 — The Prohibition war came back to the Senate after a month's vacation today when that body began consideration of President Hoover's plan for transferring prohibition enforcement to the Department of Justice.

There was but little opposition to the transfer features of the bill already passed by the House. Both wets and drys, however, were exercised of the control of industrial alcohol and the permit system.

PREPARE CHANGES

Senator Tydings (D) of Md., prominent wet, prepared a handful of amendments, seeking to change the provisions by the President and his Law Enforcement Commission. One of the Tyding amendments would completely revise the president's plan for dividing control over industrial alcohol permits between the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury.

Tydings proposed retention of the alcohol permit control in the Treasury Department, but he would give the Attorney General power to veto any and all permits. His substitute plan provides if the Attorney General possess "information of such character" as to indicate a permit should not be granted, the filing of his protest with the treasury department would prevent issuance of the permit. In event the Attorney General received such information after a permit was issued, the Treasury Department would be directed to initiate revocation proceedings against the permit-holder.

Another interesting feature of the debate will revolve around an amendment, proposed by Senator Hayden (D) of Ariz., establishing a new and unified United States Border Patrol in the Department of Justice. All the personnel of the present border patrols, operated by the Labor Department, the Immigration Bureau and the Customs Bureau of the Treasury, would be transferred into the Department of Justice and the old units discontinued.

BROKEN PRINCIPAL IN HORST CASE NOW SEEMS WELL-TO-DO

Charles Hannah Buys Boy Bicycle With Roll "Big Enough To Choke a Cow"—Moves With Family To Cleveland Although He Doesn't Work.

WOOSTER, O., May 14— "To what do you owe your success?"

Wayne-co authorities would like to know the answer to this question from Charles Hannah, who not so long ago was one of the principals in Ohio's most baffling case--the Melvin Horst mystery.

Two or three months ago, Hannah was reputedly as "poor as Job's turkey"--so poor, in fact, that newspapermen aided in the support of his family while he was being held in jail in connection with the disappearance of four-year-old Melvin Horst from Orrville, December 27, 1928.

Today Hannah is apparently well-to-do, enough so that he bought a bicycle for his son, Junior, and still had plenty with which to move to Cleveland.

What is the source of this mysterous wealth, Wayne-co authorities want to know, which Hannah has apparently inherited since indictments charging him with murder and child stealing in connection with the Horst case were nolled and he was released last April 4 from the county jail?

"Hannah hasn't done a lick of work since he got out of jail," according to Deputy Sheriff John Kiener, "But he seems to have plenty of money."

Before he became implicated in the Horst case, Hannah worked in a local bakery at $14 per week.

Since his release from jail and the entanglements of the Horst case. Hannah has been living at his home here with his wife and their son, Junior, and Mrs. Hannah's 82-year-old mother.

The curiosity of Wayne-co officials as to Hannah's mysterious wealth was first aroused several weeks ago when the man and his son walked into a store here and purchased a bicycle for the boy. A roll of bills from which Hannah paid for the bicycle was described by the proprietor of the store as "big enough to choke a horse,'

That Hannah and his family have moved to Cleveland was revealed when John Shanklin, who owns the house in which Hannah lived, went to collect the rent. Hannah and his family were gone. It was later learned that Hannah had moved to Cleveland, where he "had a job or something," according to authorities.

Cleveland Officials Begin Vigorous Fight to Oust Mint-Vending Machines

CLEVELAND, May 14— A vigorous drive to rid the city of all mint-vending slot machines was begun by police here today following a court ruling which branded the devices as gambling schemes.

Judge Fred H. Wolf, sitting in common pleas court late yesterday, dismissed a suit in which Walter Mattias, slot machine distributor, sought to enjoin police from interference with, siezure and destruction of slot machines owned by him.

Judge Wolf declared that slot machines and other such devices are gambling machines whether they are used for actual profit in cash or trade to customers.

Answering the contention that the machines are "amusement devices," Judge Wolf commented that since some people gain amusement by playing the machines, they were gambling on the amount of amusement that could be derived every time they inserted a coin.

ILLINOIS SENATORIAL COSTS BEING PROBED BY SENATORS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, May 14—First hand investigation into expenditures in the recent Illinois Senatorial primary was underway with the Senate Campaign Fund Committee planning early hearings in Chicago.

The committee contemplates a searching investigation into all expenditures in behalf of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, first woman nominated for the Senate by a major political party, and in behalf of Senator Charles S. Deneen, who was defeated. Mrs. McCormick already has reported spending $252,572 of her personal funds while Deneen reported expenditures of only $24,495.

The procedure contemplated by the Senate committee will follow closely that adopted by the Reed Slush Fund Committee, which investigated the Smith-McKinley primary of 1926. The revelations of huge contributions by Samuel Insull, Chicago utility magnate, to the cause of Frank L. Smith, who defeated Senator William McKinley in the Republican senatorial primary, led to the victor's expulsion by the Senate. In that inquiry, the Senate committee first held preliminary hearings in Washington and then went to Chicago, getting first-hand information about contributions to Smith's campaign.

Insull did not appear publicly in the primary this year. He was not recorded as a contributor to either the McCormick or Deneen campaign funds.

They merely carried an announcement he made to Internationla News Service at the height of the Smith inquiry that he would never again contribute to a senatorial campaign fund.

When the Chicago hearings get under way, the committee will seek information on expenditures in Cook county, which Mrs. McCormick carried over Deneen by a large majority, but in which she reported only such expenditures as were necessary to conduct her state headquarters. In the Smith inquiry, the old Reed committee added to his expenditures all sums spent by local Republican organizations to aid his candidacy. The same plan probably will be followed in dealing with Mrs. McCormick's campaign costs. This would considerably increase the quarter million dollar total already reported.

Special attention will be paid by the committee to the cost of the balloting. In the primary, Mrs. McCormick was given 690,000 votes compared to 480,000 for Deneen. Thus far, she reported ten times as much in expenditures as Deneen, getting only about 44 percent more votes.

The Pennsylvania primary will be investigated later, and the Keystone state has chosen between Senator Joseph R. Grundy and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis. Committee investigators have been sent into Pennsylvania to check on expenditures during the closing days of the Grundy-Davis campaign.

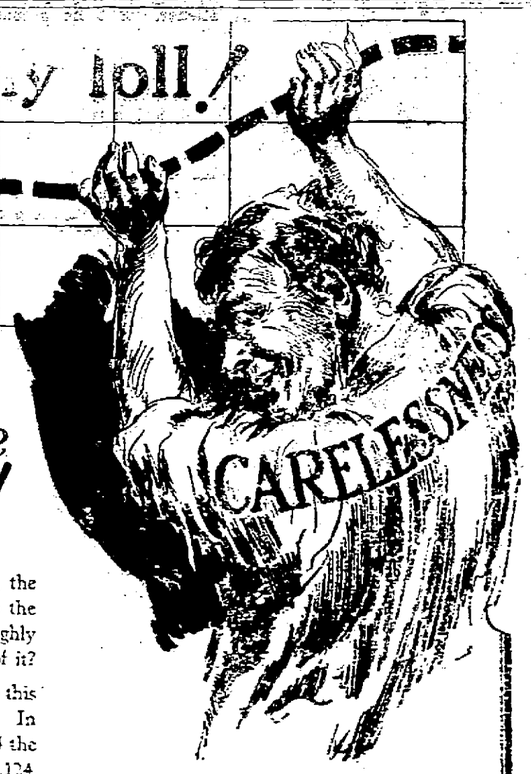
Fire's Yearly Toll!



Help Keep the Red Line of Fire DOWN!

For every year you have lived, the Fire toll has steadily increased to the point where everyone is thoroughly alarmed. What is to be the end of it?

In 1922 the aggregate fire loss in this country was about $506,541,001. In 1923 it was $535,372,782. In 1924 the figures slowly crept up to $549,062,124. The National Board of Fire Underwriters, by adding 25 per cent to include losses not actually reported to the Actuarial Bureau, estimates that the loss by fire in the United States during 1925 reached the staggering total of $559,428,858, most of which was from strictly preventable or partly preventable causes. And the current figures are just as terrifying. Always upward goes that red line on the chart.

Fire experts tell us that much of this waste could be prevented—if people would ONLY BE CAREFUL. Evidently, the day has not arrived when they will take the subject seriously. Aggregate statistics mean little to them, as individuals. The Clean Up idea will bring the red line down. Is YOUR home free from menace?

Clean Up Paint Up

Better Brushes mean better work

You, as a home owner, will remember that old can of water-soaked brushes in the cellar—five or six of and with the paint from the very first job hardened in place.

Why not start a new regime? Buy a set of brushes for the various interesting household purposes—buy paint remover, turpentine or gasoline with which to clean them, that they may be ready for the next job.

In any event, be assured that there is a brush designed for every class of painting. You can do your best only when you recognize this fact.

NATIONAL GUARDS PRACTICE TARGETS IN PENITENTIARY

COLUMBUS, O.,— The Ohio State Penitentiary walls, which, during the past few weeks, have re-echoed the horrible cries of dying convicts, the roar of life-devasting flames, and the sharp cracks of the guns of Penitentiary guards and the militia, will soon resound with the continuous rat-tat-tat of machine gun and steady rifle fire.

But before, where the shots spelled tragedy, death and suffering, they will now mean that Ohio National guardsmen are simply practicing marksmanship.

According to Colonel Robert Haubrich, in command of the troops at the big state prison, an army rifle and machine gun range will be erected within the walls of the prison. Guardsmen on duty will be given practice.

Erection of the range gave rise to reports that the troops will be kept at the prison for some time to come. Colonel Robert Haubrich refused to say how long the khaki-clad soldiers will be posted at the penal institution, except to reiterate his statement that "they will be kept here as long as necessary."

Guardsmen, who, Sunday afternoon, started an official check of the convicts within the prison, were far from completion of their task today.

Repairs on the G and H cellblock, where 320 convicts perished in Easter Monday night's fire, caused the removal of the prisoners which had since been confined there in the lower ranges. The convicts were locked in repaired cells of "White City" cellblock, and the count became so muddled that the guardsmen were forced to start over again.

A scrare was occasioned late last night when several shots were fired by guardsmen patrolling the streets outside of the penitentiary. It was explained that a motorist had refused to halt at the commands of guardsmen and that they had fired upon his machine, puncturing a tire. First reports had said that an attempt had been made by the convicts to scale the walls.

MEARS PLANS WORLD TOUR

NEW YORK, May 14— John Henry Mears, speedy globe girdler, today set about making plans for his attempt to circle the world in shorter time than the Graf Zeppelin in its historic flight. He will hop off from New York about June 1 in his plane Tailwind II, which will be piloted by Fred Melchoir, noted Swedish flyer.

Mears arrived here yesterday after a leisurely transcontinental trip from Los Angeles, making the jump in 20 hours of flying time.

The record for the Graf was 21 days and seven hours and Mears said he was confident of lowering that time.

The route Mears expects to travel is from New York to Harbor Grace, thence to Ireland and Southhampton, England, to Berlin, Moscow and Sibera stops at Novasilvisk, Chita, Khaboravak and Petro Pabock. He will then hop across the Pacific to Seward, Alaska, thence down the coast to Seattle and across the United States to New York.

Mear's plane is a Lockheed-Vega with Pratt-Whitney wasp motor and is equipped with two-way radio. It will be known as the "City of New York."

PICKAWAY-TP PIG CLUB ORGANIZES

The Logan Elm Pig Club held its first meeting May 12, at the Pickaway school building. H. Stanley Lewis was in charge of the meeting.

There were eight members present. The officers were elected for the year are: President, Charles Boggs; Vice-president, Lawrence Wolford; secretary-Treasurer, Wayne Wilson; News Reporter, William Carroll.

It was decided that all meetings would be held the first Tuesday of each month. The second meeting will be held June 3, at the Pickaway-twp school building.

MANY AILMENTS WERE BANISHED BY NEW KONJOLA

"New Medicine Worked Wonders For My Husband and Myself," Says Toledo Lady.

MRS. L. V. MILLER.

"Konjola brought new health and happiness into my life," said Mrs. L. V. Miller, 332 Twelfth street, Toledo. "For two years I suffered from stomach trouble. I had terrible gas pains, and my heart palpitated until I scarcely could get my breath. My liver became affected and I was subject to dizzy spells and black spots at times would appear before my eyes. Headathes caused additional misery.

"Then my husband, who also was in poor health, tried Konjola and it helped him so wonderfully that it was only natural for me to think that it must be the medicine I needed. I have taken only three bottles of this medicine, and I want to say that I was not the least bit disappointed in my expectations. My stomach troubles have left me completely and the dizzy spells and headaches never bother me now. I am no longer a victim of constipation. Konjola worked wonders for my husband and myself, and we both recommend it wherever we can."

Konjola has become the most talked of medicine in America because it makes good. And Konjola makes good in those most stubborn cases when given a fair trial. Six to eight bottles are recommended as a fair test.

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

Tex Anding, star pilot of the Gates Flying Service, whose quick action, combined with an effective one-arm punch, averted a serious air disaster when one of the six passengers he was flying in a pleasure flight over Long Island City, N. ROUMANIANS OUST CAROL

BUCHAREST, May 14— The Roumanian cabinet took another step Tuesday to blot out the exiled ex-crown Prince Carol from the public life of his native land.

An official decree prohibited all public debate on any question relating to the exiled heir.

A liberal anti-carol pamphlet was confiscated, as well as today's issues of the newspapers Cuventul and Universal, both of which contained articles about him.

WILKINS PLANS POLAR PARTY

WASHINGTON, May 14— An ambitious project for a North Polar expedition by Sir Robert Wilkins in one of the navy's obsolete submarines, was before the navy department today, with some doubt whether such a craft would be available because of the London naval treaty.

Wilkins has filed a written request with the department to be permitted to charter the old O-12, now about ready for the junk pile. The request was made on Wilkins' behalf by Sloan Danenhower, a former naval reserve lieutenant commander.

Danenhower would command the submarine if the navy granted the request, he said, and Wilkins would lead the expidition. In his letter Danenhower outlined various alterations that could be made to suit the craft to operation under ice, and he estimated it could move under such conditions at a speed of four miles an hour.

Assistant secretary of the navy Jahncke, when first approached in person by Danenhower, expressed the belief the submarine could not be sold because of the terms of the naval treaty. Danenhower's suggestion concerning a charter was designed to meet this possible objection.

MARYSVILLE, O., May 14—Injuries which he sustianed in Columbus April 25, when he was run down by a bread truck, had caused the death Tuesday of John R. Taylor, 82, former director of the Union-co infirmary and justice of the peace here for 20 years.

GROUP PLIES SEC. STIMSON

WASHINGTON, May 14—A veritable barrage of questions bearing on naval parity between the United States and Great Britain was directed at Secretary of State Stimson when he again appeared before the senate foreign relations committee for questioning, concerning the new London naval treaty.

Stimson staunchly defended the pact of London, asserting that "to give a bird's eye view, the treaty takes the United States out of a condition of inferiority and places it in a condition of superiority."

Senators on the committee exhibited a lively curiosity as to how this figured out, and Stimson was plied with questions.

A BUYER'S MARKET

Commodity prices have been declining for seven consecutive months. They have been declining irregularly for 10 years, and now stand, as a whole, at the lowest point in that period. The price index is only 3 percent above that of June 1, 1921

There are two ways of looking at the situation. One, the merchant's and manufacturer's way, is not very encouraging except as the future offers hope of stiffening prices. The other, the customer's way, is positively cheerful. It's really astonishing how cheaply a family can live just now—what bargains one can get for his money or credit.

Cynics will immediately reply that there's a joker in it; people haven't got the money, and a good many haven't even got the credit. But nobody can say that the American public, or any considerable part of it, is flat broke.

There is plenty of buying power, if people choose to use it Look how they have been buying stock. Savings deposits in many communities have been increasing though less rapidly than usual. People keep on living, and therefore buying. They are merely buying less than usual.

Such a rare buyer's market is an opportunity and a challenge If people took more advantage of it, they would not only satisfy their own wants but improve business.

A STAGE VICTORY

Four months ago George M. Cohan was on his way to Hollywood with a signed contract in his pocket. He was to write and act for the talkies, and the company he was to work for had guaranteed him $1,000,000 for his services.

Suddenly Cohan turned around and headed back toward Broadway. He found the stage meant too much for him to leave it. The story is told of how he came to see the light in this way.

He was going to Hollywood by slow stages, appearing along the way in his play, "Gambling." Everywhere he was met with warm response from the public. Cohan is one of America's best-liked actors. In Chicago, on opening night of his show, the applause was generous from start to finish. Cohan took 10 curtain calls. Then he made a little speech.

"Friends, it does my heart good to see your enthusiasm about the theatre in these days of so much ballyhoo about the talkies As long as you people show so much enthusiasm, all that about the theatre dying is the bunk."

So he gave up Hollywood This may not be a permanent renunciation. An actor, and particularly George M. Cohan, may change his mind. Cohan may some day feel that the drama is carried to more people through the talkies than through expensive productions of legitimate theatres There certainly is room for both types of entertainment But this story about Cohan won't do him or his beloved theatre any harm

GUM, GAIN AND BEAUTY

One branch of big business is cheerful, anyway. It's chewing gum. A leading gum manufacturer whose company made nearly $12,000,000 last year says he expects to make still more this year. Whatever else people may do or not do, they will chew. Especially if urged thereto by appealing ads. The manufacturer is spending $5,500,000 this year to make the American people gum-conscious

The ads tell, among other things, why chewing gum beautifies the mouth and face. Some of us may have our secret doubts about this. It has never occurred to us that chewers were any nicer to look at than non-chewers. Look at Will Rogers, for instance. And he's been working at it for many years

FILMS AND TRAVELERS

The general passenger agent of a steamship company credits motion pictures with a recent increase in travel in countries bordering the Pacific ocean. Movies with their scenes in the exotic South Seas, this G.P.A. says, consider the influence on the potential travelers who view them.

No doubt of it. Movies bring to a thirst for travel, so are works of fiction. So is art. All these factors help. There is another factor, which is probably more valuable than any of these

The desire for travel is not a new emotion People have always experienced it in varying degrees But never before has travel been so simple, so comparatively inexpensive, so convenient and comfortable as it is today. Individuals who, in an earlier generation,

"SHEIK'S WIFE"

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XXXII.

But Barton Wade did notice. He was a big, jovial person and his black eyes, which looked very black indeed because of his white hair, surveyed the slim, eager girl with appreciation. He made her sit beside him on Nory's divan and instead of being stricken dumb with embarrassment as she had feared, she soon found herself laughing with the two men over her experiences as an artist's wife.

"You see, women sort of spoil Ken, Mr. Wade. They think it's all romance, being an artist and he's so good-looking they never dream he's just an ordinary boy who has to be chased with throat-gargle when he smokes too much and gets hives if he eats strawberries They come in and look at his studio and sigh and want to sit in his chair just a minute——"

"And why don't you write all this?" Mr. Wade wanted to know

"Write it?" Eve asked in a puzzled way. "But it's not—not what anyone would want to read. Is it? Besides, you see I couldn't write. I'm afraid; I'm not a bit artistic—they all tell me this——"

Wade threw back his head and roared. "The trouble with most writers, my dear, is that they're too artistic. Write it by all means just as you're telling it. No frills; that would spoil it. Make a series of articles, half a dozen, and if they're half as good as I think they'll be you've sold them right now"

"But—oh, but Mr. Wade! Ken wouldn't like it a bit——"

"Oh, no—and how is the young gentleman to know? They'll be anonymous, you understand; we'll sign them "By An Artist's Wife." The lure of mystery — what do you say?"

Eve looked from his twinkling eyes to Nory who was nodding her head up and down. "Grab the chance, Eve; not many like it——"

"Well—I'll try. It's—oh, you're awfully kind—both of you——"

And this was the way Eve turned author. No one in The Lane but Nory dreamed what she was doing, so carefully did she work a spot of time each day along with her many domestic duties. Time, though impossible at first for Eve was spending most of her time at Spring Garden

And presently "Wade's Weekly" appeared in The Lane and the tribe began to talk about the "Revelations Of An Artist's Wife."

"Amusing," drawled Elma over the "Revelations." "That direct, virile style reminds you of Shaw, don't you think" Of course, it wasn't done by a woman"

"Meow," retorted Chuck "Jealous because 'Wade's Weekly' turned down your stuff, my lady"

"Oh, yes? I'll have you know when I write I don't bother with any dinky weekly magazine, Chuck. Holly"

"Do tell. And Wade's paying no less than [illegible] per each for the [illegible]

She could mix up her work which she hated and devote herself to running a neat household

So much was said about the Revelations that Ken fell to read the first article and to Eve's amazement was quite emotional with sympathy.

"Poor little girl. Tell you what, Eve, it's hard on a woman to go through life and not be understood. Damn hard for a girl to get by on her own."

"Of course you wouldn't get it, you're so practical, darling. No temperament. You'd never understand how the woman that wrote this feels."

She laughed at that. "Yet I'm an artist's wife. The writer—why it might have been me!"

"You!" He stared and she knew a moment of fear, thinking she had said too much "But he smiled away the notion that Eve could have written the Revelations and with her pride all bruised she cried spitefully "Maybe Puss wrote that stuff She's misunderstood enough, isn't she?"

He took it seriously. "Now you've said something. Shouldn't wonder a bit—not a bit. She's done some work—nothing much, she said—but, then, she's such a modest little thing. I'm going to find out just the same"

It was then that Eve repeated her pet ejaculation, changing the gender. "You men!"

But she determined not to be beaten by anything Ken said or did for she was beginning to learn that only the clear-minded writer can work well and she wanted her Revelations to be good And as she watched her thought from her husband she forgot many of the small worries which had centered about him, such, for example, as expenditures

Ken it seemed never could manage to pay his bills. "How you ever got along before I married you and tightened up on the old purse strings" she stormed at him one day

"But it's such a nuisance writing a flock of checks Kill half a day that could be put to better use. Don't be stuffy, Eve."

"Suppose folks you work for felt that way about you? It isn't right, it's dishonest, Ken; you're just careless."

To cater to her unbohemian taste, as he called it, for keeping out of debt, Ken opened a joint checking account and Eve would see that he indorsed checks so she might make out deposits, and she took it upon herself to straighten all accounts the first of each month

But now she neglected this and in no time at all there was a stack of unopened envelopes from tradesfolk in the pile as well as it Have fed on Ken's desk. And never, always were [illegible] from the bank that their [illegible] was low drawn.

"I'll fix that up tomorrow," Eve would tell herself But to morrow she would forget and presently the [illegible] were in much the [illegible] state of everybody else in the Lane except the Hoyt

The fact that antique furniture is made of any particular wood is not taken into serious consideration in the valuation of an article. The age and condition are of more importance.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

Upon the interesting subject of in interesting motion picture has the conflict of the classics and jazz, been built that is rich in human interest and ascends consistently, through numerous tense and dramatic situations, to a thrilling and unexpected climax. The film is "The Melody Man," the Columbia all-talking musical drama which opened at the Met Theatre R William Neill did the direction.

HUMAN INTEREST PLOT

Love and intrigue in Vienna form the background of the plot. Von Kemper, famous composer of "The Dream Rhapsody," shoots and kills the man who betrays his home He escapes with his daughter Elsa, Fifteen years later finds him in New York, a leader of an orchestra in a cheap restaurant. He feels safe because the one clue that could lead to his capture, "The Dream Rhapsody" has been carefully guarded. He played it for his daughter but one time. Realizing the magnitude of the composition Elsa arranges it in jazz form and permits a jazz leader to introduce it at an important concert The tragic results of her well meant efforts supply the denouncement of this unusual and dramatic story.

Outstanding Performances

John St Polis is reminiscent of David Warfield in his role of the composer William Collier, Jr, holds the sympathy of the audience and Alice Day strikes just the right note of sweetness as Elsa

AT THE CLIFTONA

"A Lady To Love," starring Vilma Banky, which will open at the Cliftona Theatre for two days beginning today, was made by the last of the "Big Ten" of film directors to embrace the new medium of talking pictures.

Victor Seastorm delayed in starting his first vocalized production not because he doesn't like dialogue films but for the reason that during all of 1928 he took a year's vacation at his old home in Sweden, his first leisure period since making of "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Scarlet Letter" and "The Divine Woman"

In "A Lady To Love' Seastorm is said to offer a new treatment of the old problem of an older man with a young wife Miss Banky has the role of Lena, a waitress who accepts by mail the proposal of an Italian vineyardist of California. Buck, played by Robert Ames, who came direct from "The Trespasser" with Gloria Swanson, is the young Irishman whose picture Tony, the fifty-year old bridegroom to be, ships in his letter of proposal. Tony is played by Edward G. Robinson of "Kibitzer," "The Racket" and other successful stage productions

The role of Father McKee is played by Lloyd Ingraham of "The Show Boat," "The Night Parade" and "So Long Letty" Anderson Lawler came form the stage ("Caste," "Saturday's Children" and "Her Cardboard Lover") to do a young country doctor. Richard Carle, the commedian, is a rural free delivery postman a pivotal character. Gum Chin, the Chinese comedian, and George Davis of "Devil May Care' and "It's a Great Life," complete the list

AT THE GRAND

A rare, light comedy, "Harmony at Home", featuring Marguerite Churchill, William Collier, Sr, and Dixie Lee, is the attraction at the Grand theatre Wednesday.

On Thursday, a wild and wooly wester, "Beauty and Bullets" is the feature picture. The story features Ted Wells and Duane Thompson.

A fallen telephone brings the heroine the most fearsome and startling message she has ever received. It is a whirlwind western

BUYER WARNED OF PEDDLERS

Through the city and state health offices the public is warned to be careful when purchasing food of any description from peddlers who have recently been working in this city. Complaints have been lodged with the authorities against the peddlers of whom it is said do not handle their products properly and in a clean and sanitary condition.

According to the officials their favorite way of selling articles, especially strawberries is to place the good berries on top and the balance, soft and overripe on the bottom. There is a lot of danger lurking in berries sold in these conditions People buying them should see that they obtain full weight.

L E. Miller, city health officer says the practice of selling foods in the open will be stopped unless foods are properly covered and pass inspection before allowed to be sold. Food handlers of this class will not be permitted to park in front of stores and other business places.

The division of foods and dairies of the department of agriculture, under the supervision of O. J Bailey, is co-operating with local authorities.

NATIVE OHIOAN CINCI MANAGER

CINCINNATI, O., May 14 — At a salary of $25,000 a year, Clarence A. Dykstra, of Los Angeles, native Ohioan, today had been appointed as city manager here.

Dykstra, who was head of the personnel division of the water and power department in the western coast city, succeeded Colonel C. O. Sherrill, who resigned the post to accept a vice-presidency in a large wholesale grocery concern.

The Los Angeles man was formerly an instructor at Ohio State University and the University of Kansas.

A BUYER' S MARKET

Commodity prices have been declining for seven consecutive months. They have been declining irregularly for 10 years, and now stand, as a whole, at the lowest point in that period. The price index is only 3 percent above that of June 1, 1921.

There are two ways of looking at the situation. One, the merchant's and manufacturer's way, is not very encouraging, except as the future offers hope of stiffening prices. The other, the customer's way, is positively cheerful. It's really astonishing how cheaply a family can live just now—what bargains one can get for his money or credit.

Cynics will immediately reply that there's a joker in it; people haven't got the money, and a good many haven't even got the credit. But nobody can say that the American public, or any considerable part of it, is flat broke.

There is plenty of buying power, if people choose to use it. Look how they have been buying stock. Savings deposits in many communities have been increasing though less rapidly than usual. People keep on living, and therefore buying. They are merely buying less than usual.

Such a rare buyer's market is an opportunity and a challenge. If people took more advantage of it, they would not only satisfy their own wants but improve business.

A STAGE VICTORY

Four months ago George M. Cohan was on his way to Hollywood with a signed contract in his pocket. He was to write and act for the talkies, and the company he was to work for had guaranteed him $1,000,000 for his services.

Suddenly Cohan turned around and headed back toward Broadway. He found the stage meant too much for him to leave it. The story is told of how he came to see the light in this way.

He was going to Hollywood by slow stages, appearing along the way in his play, "Gambling." Everywhere he was met with warm response from the public. Cohan is one of America's best-liked actors. In Chicago, on opening night of his show, the applause was generous from start to finish. Cohan took 10 curtain calls. Then he made a little speech.

"Friends, it does my heart good to see your enthusiasm about the theatre in these days of so much ballyhoo about the talkies. As long as you people show so much enthusiasm, all that about the theatre dying is the bunk."

So he gave up Hollyhood. This may not be a permanent renunciation. An actor, and particularly George M. Cohan, may change his mind. Cohan may some day feel that the drama is carried to more people through the talkies than through expensive productions of legitimate theatres. There certainly is room for both types of entertainment. But this story about Cohan won't do him or his beloved theatre any harm.

GUM, GAIN AND BEAUTY

One branch of big business is cheerful, anyway. It's chewing gum. A leading gum manufacturer whose company made nearly $12,000,000 last year says he expects to make still more this year. Whatever else people may do or not do, they will chew. Especially if urged thereto by appealing ads. The manufacturer is spending $6,500,000 this year to make the American people gum-conscious.

The ads tell, among other things, why chewing gum beautifies the mouth and face. Some of us may have out secret doubts about this. It has never occurred to us that chewers were any lovelier to look at than non-chewers. Look at Will Rogers, for instance. And he's been working at it for many years.

FILMS AND TRAVELORS

The general passenger agent of a steamship company credits motion pictures with the marked increase in travel in countries bordering the Pacific Ocean. Movies with their locale in the exotic South Seas or the Orient have considerable influence on the potential travelers who view them.

No doubt pictures are stimulating to a thirst for travel. So are works of fiction. So is history. So is art. All these factors help. There is another factor which is probably more valuable than any of these.

The desire for travel is not a new emotion. People have always experienced it in varying degrees. But never before has travel been so simple, so comparatively inexpensive, so convenient and comfortable as it is today. Individuals who, in an earlier generation, would have been compelled by circumstances to do their traveling in imagination only, can now, by saving judiciously, gratify this desire. They do so in ever-growing throngs.

"SHEIK'S WIFE"

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XXXII.

But Barton Wade did notice. He was a big, jovial person and his black eyes, which looked very black indeed because of his white hair, surveyed the slim, eager girl with appreciation. He made her sit beside him on Nory's divan and instead of being stricken dumb with embarrassment as she had feared, she soon found herself laughing with the two men over her experiences as an artist's wife.

"You see, women sort of spoil Ken, Mr. Wade. They think it's all romance, being an artist and he's so good-looking they never dream he's just an ordinary boy who has to be chased with throat-gargle when he smokes too much and gets hives if he eats strawberries. They come in and look at his studio and sigh and want to sit in his chair just a minute——"

"And why don't you write all this?" Mr. Wade wanted to know.

"Write it?" Eve asked in a puzzled way. "But it's not—not what anyone would want to read, is it? Besides, you see I couldn't write, I'm afraid; I'm not a bit artistic—they all tell me this——"

Wade threw back his head and roared. "The trouble with most writers, my dear, is that they're too artistic. Write it by all means just as you're telling it. No frills; that would spoil it. Make a series of articles, half a dozen, and if they're half as good as I think they'll be you've sold them right now."

"But—oh, but Mr. Wade! Ken wouldn't like it a bit——"

"Oh, ho—and how is the young gentleman to know? They'll be anonymous, you understand; we'll sign them "By An Artist's Wife." The lure of mystery — what do you say?"

Eve looked from his twinkling eyes to Nory who was nodding his head up and down. "Grab the chance, Eve; not many like this——"

"Well—I'll try. It's—oh, you're awfully kind—both of you——"

And this was the way Eve turned author. No one in The Lane save Nory dreamed what she was doing, so carefully did she work in secret but as weeks went along she found more opportunity than she had thought possible at first for Ken was spending most of his time at Spring Garden.

On the first anniversary of their marriage they had planned to go to Lakeview but Ken was hurrying to finish his cover and Eve was absorbed in putting her experiences on paper and minded very little when the plan fell through. Even the pearl and sapphire bracelet Ken gave her in honor of the day made no deep impression for if she were not artistic Eve had the artist's gift of concentration.

And finally she took the first of her articles into the city and gave it to Barton Wade and he shook hands with her and seemed mightily pleased.

And presently "Wade's Weekly" appeared in The Lane and the tribe began to talk about the "Revelations Of An Artist's Wife."

"Amusing," drawled Elma over the "Revelations." "That direct, virile style reminds you of Shaw, don't you think? Of course, it wasn't done by a woman."

"Meow," retorted Chuck. "Jealous because 'Wade's Weekly' turned down your stuff, my lady."

"Oh, yes? I'll have you know when I write I don't bother with any dinky weekly magazine, Chuck Holly."

"Do tell. And Wade's paying no less than three hundred per each for the stuff it buys."

Eve caught her breath. Barton Wade had said nothing to her about price, why, if she did six of these stories it would mean eighteen hundred dollars at the least—and this for a girl who never had earned a penny in her life! And all the fun of writing them in. It just didn't seem possible.

"Well, I say the artist was a fool—if she was a girl," Ivy sputtered. "Why a man should put up with a conceited selfish hussy, babying him along, letting him to use her for a doormat!"

"Oh, shut up, Ivy," Ken said wearily. "You've got no cause to rave."

This brought a frosty little smile from Ivy. The colony was saying that she and Pierre were about to call it quits to their marriage and one day when Eve was in the city she had met Ivy and Mr. Monteith Clark coming out of a renting agency office. Clark was as different from Pierre as could be; as his wife Ivy would have a safe if slightly humdrum home into which she could bring her little son. She could give up her work which she hated and devote herself to running a neat household.

So much was said about the Revelations that Ken finally read the first article and to Eve's amazement was quite emotional with sympathy.

"Poor little girl. Tell you what, Eve, it's hard on a woman to go through life and not be understood. Damn hard for a girl to get by on her own."

She knew then what was in his mind—Puss. This was the line Puss handed out, making her eyes very round and hurt and even contriving a tear or two though carefully, lest the blacking on her lashes wash muddy streaks down her face.

In a stinging irritation she said "Snap out of it, Ken. When did you turn sob sister?"

"Of course you wouldn't get it, you're so practical, darling. No temperament. You'd never understand how the woman that wrote this feels."

She laughed at that. "Yet I'm an artist's wife. The writer—why it might have been me!"

"You!" He stared and she knew a moment of fear, thinking she had said too much. But he smiled away the notion that Eve could have written the Revelations and with her pride all bruised she cried spitefully: "Maybe Puss wrote that stuff. She's misunderstood enough, isn't she?"

He took it seriously. "Now you've said something. Shouldn't wonder a bit—not a bit. She's done some work—nothing much, she said—but then she's such a modest little thing. I'm going to find out just the same."

It was then that Eve repeated his pet ejaculation, changing the gender. "You men!"

But she determined not to be upset by anything Ken said or did for she was beginning to learn that only the clear-minded writer can work well and she wanted her Revelations to be good. And as she withdrew her thought from her husband she forgot many of the small worries which had centered about him, such, for example, as expenditures.

Ken it seemed never could manage to pay his bills. "How you ever got along before I married you and tightened up on the old purse strings!" she stormed at him once.

"But it's such a nuisance writing a flock of checks. Kills half a day that could be put to better use. Don't be stuffy, Eve."

"Suppose folks you work for felt that way about you? It isn't that you're dishonest, Ken; you're just careless."

To cater to her unbohemian taste, as he called it, for keeping out of debt, Ken opened a joint checking account and Eve would see that he indorsed checks so she might make their deposits, and she took it upon herself to straighten all accounts the first of each month.

But now she neglected this and in no time at all there was a stack of unopened envelopes from tradesfolk in the city as well as in Haverford on Ken's desk. And notices always were coming from the bank that their account was overdrawn.

"I'll fix that up tomorrow," Eve would tell herself. But to-morrow she would forget and presently the Wilmers were in much the financially upset state of everybody else in the Lane excepting the Hollys.

DEAF MAN KILLED BY PENNSY FLYER

ZANESVILLE,O., May 14— The deafness of Ira Hutton, 79, is held to be responsible for his death Tuesday. The man was run down and killed by a fast Pennsylvania passenger train on the tracks in front of his home five miles north of here yesterday.

Hutton, who was returning from hunting, was deaf and it is believed he failed to hear the approaching train.

The fact that antique furniture is made of any particular wood is not taken into serious consideration in the valuation of an article. The age and condition are of more importance.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

Upon the interesting subject of in interesting motion picture has the conflict of the classics and jazz, been built that is rich in human interest and ascends consistently, through numerous tense and dramatic situations, to a thrilling and unexpected climax. The film is "The Melody Man," the Columbia all-talking musical drama which opened at the Met Theatre. R William Neill did the direction.

HUMAN INTEREST PLOT

Love and intrigue in Vienna form the background of the plot. Von Kemper, famous composer of "The Dream Rhapsody," shoots and kills the man who betrays his home. He escapes with his daughter Elsa,. Fifteen years later finds him in New York, a leader of an orchestra in a cheap restaurant. He feels safe because the one clue that could lead to his capture, "The Dream Rhapsody" has been carefully guarded. He played it for his daughter but one time. Realizing the magnitude of the composition Elsa arranges it in jazz form and permits a jazz leader to introduce it at an important concert. The tragic results of her well meant efforts supply the denouncement of this unusual and dramatic story .

Outstanding Performances

John St. Polis is reminiscent of David Warfield in his role of the composer. William Collier, Jr., holds the sympathy of the audience and Alice Day strikes just the right note of sweetness as Elsa.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"A Lady To Love," starring Vilma Banky, which will open at the Cliftona Theatre for two days beginning today, was made by the last of the "Big Ten" of film directors to embrace the new medium of talking pictures.

Victor Seastorm delayed in starting his first vocalized production not because he doesn't like dialogue films but for the reason that during all of 1928 he took a year's vacation at his old home in Sweden; his first leisure period since making of "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Scarlet Letter" and "The Divine Woman."

In "A Lady To Love' Seastorm is said to offer a new treatment of the old problem of an older man with a young wife. Miss Banky has the role of Lena, a waitress who accepts by mail the proposal of an Italian vineyardist of California. Buck, played by Robert Ames, who came direct from "The Trespasser" with Gloria Swanson, is the young Irishman whose picture Tony, the fifty-year old bridegroom to be, slips in his letter of proposal. Tony is played by Edward G. Robinson of "Kibitzer," "The Racket" and other successful stage productions.

The role of Father McKee is played by Lloyd Ingraham of "The Show Boat," "The Night Parade" and "So Long Letty." Anderson Lawler came form the stage ("Caste," "Saturday's Children" and "Her Cardboard Lover") to do a young country doctor. Richard Carle, the commedian, is a rural free delivery postman, a pivotal character. Gum Chin, the Chinese comedian, and George Davis of "Devil May Care' and "It's a Great Life," complete the list.

AT THE GRAND

A rare, light comedy, "Harmony at Home", featuring Marguerite Churchill, William Collier, Sr., and Dixie Lee, is the attraction at the Grand theatre Wednesday.

On Thursday, a wild and wooly wester, "Beauty and Bullets" is the feature picture. The story features Ted Wells and Duane Thompson.

A fallen telephone brings the heroine the most fearsome and startling message she has ever received. It is a whirlwind western.

BUYER WARNED OF PEDDLERS

Through the city and state health offices the public is warned to be careful when purchasing food of any description from peddlers who have recently been working in this city. Complaints have been lodged with the authorities against the peddlers of whom it is said do not handle their products properly and in a clean and sanitary condition.

According to the officials their favorite way of selling articles, especially strawberries, is to place the good berries on top and the balance, soft and overripe on the bottom. There is a lot of danger lurking in berries sold in these conditions. People buying them should see that they obtain full weight.

L. E. Miller, city health officer, says the practice of selling foods in the open will be stopped unless foods are properly covered and pass inspection before allowed to be sold. Food handlers of this class will not be permitted to park in front of stores and other business places.

The division of foods and dairies of the department of agriculture, under the supervision of O. J. Bailey, is co-operating with local authorities.

NATIVE OHIOAN CINCI MANAGER

CINCINNATI, O., May 14— At a salary of $25,000 a year, Clarence A. Dykstra, of Los Angeles, native Ohioan, today had been appointed as city manager here.

Dykstra, who was head of the personnel division of the water and power department in the western coast city, succeeded Colonel C. O. Sherrill, who resigned the post to accept a vice-presidency in a large wholesale grocery concern.

The Los Angeles man was formerly an instructor at Ohio State University and the University of Kansas.

COURT HEARS CLEVELANDER

COLUMBUS, O.,— After listening to oral arguments, the Ohio supreme court took under advisement the request of counsel for former state representative Thomas W. Fleming, Cleveland, colored, for an order permitting the Cuyahoga-co common pleas court to investigate the charge that Fleming, who was convicted of accepting a bribe while a member of the Cleveland city council, did not receive a fair trial because at least five jurors were members of the Klu Klux Klan.

Fleming, a former Republican presidential elector, was sentenced to serve two years and seven months in Ohio Penitentiary. After affirming the judgement of the lower courts, the supreme court recently rejected an application for a rehearing.

Attorney Alexander Martin, Cleveland, colored, submitted argument today on behalf of Fleming. He presented an affidavit accusing the following jurors of having been members of the Klu Klux Klan while serving on the jury during the Fleming trial; Mary Ricks, Berea; E. B. Sanford, North Olmsted, and Harry Meacham, Stanley Ciego and C. F. Dietrick, all of Cleveland. Martin urged that the court's decree ordering Fleming's imprisonment be delayed pending further action in the common pleas court.

Attorney David Ralph Hartz, Cleveland, assistant county prosecutor, asked the supreme court to reject Martin's request. He said persons alleged to have charged that these jurors belonged to the Klu Klux Klan had denied the allegation. He indicated that further delay by the supreme court in this case would interfere with orderly procedure in the lower courts.

Miss Frances Ackland, the girl, was aroused by music from a novel jewel box which the burglar had picked up. She screamed. The burglar picked up a suitcase at the foot of her bed and struck her across the face with it, breaking off one of the girl's teeth.

In commenting on the loss of the tooth. Miss Ackland said: "It doesn't really make any difference as I had planned to have the tooth fixed anyway."

Mrs. J. C. Likes was the second victim, She awakened to find the intruder fumbling in a cabinet in her room. She screamed. The burglar fled.

The burglar secured his only loot when he invaded the residence of Mrs. Bessie Kilman. Mrs. Kilman and her daughter, Martha, said that they had heard the burglar but did not investigate until later when they found that he took $1 and a purse which was valued at $2.50.

S. J. Ferguson reported that he awakened to find a man staring into his bedroom window.

"I asked him what he wanted and he fled," Ferguson declared.

Descriptions which were given to police caused them to believe the same man entered all three homes, and attempted entrance into the fourth.

SCATTERED PARTS OF WORLD REPORT IMPROVED BUSINESS

Changing Economic Picture Throughout World Should Prove Favorable To American Foreign Trade Which Slumped Seriously First of Year.

By Robert S. Thornburgh

WASHINGTON, May 13— From widely scattered parts of the world come reports to the commerce department of at least an indication of a turn in the tide of international business stagnation.

Low money rates, price improvements, increasing optimism of business leaders and the prospect that commerce and industry of the United States are showing real signs of recovery, as reflected by heavier retail sales, have encouraged officials to believe normal conditions may be anticipated.

The changing economic picture throughout the world should prove favorable to American foreign trade which slumped seriously the first four months of the year. materials, would increase buying power abroad and would help the trade of this country.

CUSTOMS GAIN

For the first time in many months there has been a gain in customs collections during the first ten days of May. Where there were substatial losses in preceding months, as compared with last year, receipts on imports gained $2,000,000 so far in May. For the fiscal year to date customs receipts were $478,769,000, a loss of $37,000,000, from the same period last year.

Extracts from reports of the government's commercial representatives abroad of encouraging character included:

Canada--trade, collections, and Rising prices, particularly of raw industrial activity are improving seasonally.

Newfoundland— a successful seal catch and the opening of navigation on the north east coast have brightened the comercial outlook.

Australia--prices at Melbourne and Sydney and wool prices ranged from 7 1-2 to 10 percent higher, with strong general competition and good clearances.

New Zealand--reports indicate advances in dairy produce prices; this with favorable weather is aiding the trading outlook.

Brazil--Brazilian business is showing definite signs of improvement.

Philippine Islands--the business community is adopting a more optimistic attitude.

Great Britian--favorable facts include an improved outlook for automotive trade and the apparent arrest, for the time being, of commodity prices declines, except in the metals section. Cheaper money is expected to facilitate industrial reorganizations.

Czechoslovakia--some indications of a slow upward trend.

South Africa--trade in April showed a slight improvement.

France--conditions fairly favorable.

The Modern Woodmen broke the spell of their losing streak and succeeded in winning a fast and thrilling game Tuesday evening from the Independent Grocers at Mason Ball Park by the score of 1 to 0. The Grocers dropped from a tie for first place by the defeat.

Both teams were playing in top-notch form and in the second inning the Woodmen succeeded in getting three men on the sacks, but a pop up pulled the Grocers out of a tight position.

Greeno of the Woodmen displayed excellent pitching form and together with the excellent support he had during the game succeeded in taking the Grocers for the count.

In the fourth frame the Woodmen scored the lone run of the game when they succeeded in getting a man, H. Davis across the plate. Greeno's single to center field scored him.

The climax of the game was really in the ninth when the Grocers were batting for their last time. Two men were down and two men on the paths, but a long fly to right field was pulled down by Joe Strawser of the Woodmen team.

The Woodmen now have a percentage rating of .333 percent by virtue of this victory. They appear much stronger at the present time than any other time in the season. Tonight they will play the Pettit-Sinclair team at the Ohio Utilities field.

HAFEY BEATS GIANTS, 6-4

Wipes Glasses Then Hits Two Doubles and Home Run —Macks Continue.

By COPELAND C. BURG

NEW YORK, May 14—If Chick Hafey's bad eyes get any worse the Giants may as well prepare for a humpty-dumpty from the top of the National league to make room for the fast climbing St. Louis Cardinals. That was evident today for Mr. Hafey pulled out a pink handkerchief in the game with the Giants yesterday and after polishing off his glasses whacked out two damaging doubles and climaxed these with a home run blast.

As a result of this man's poor eyesight the Giants collapsed to St. Louis 6 to 4 and the Cards surplanted Pittsburgh in the up and down column.

It was a sad day for Willie Walker, the Giant hurler, for he was subjected to losing the game right in front of a flock of his neighbors who came over the river from East St. Louis to see the home boy perform. The Cards have won seven in a row.

The world renowned Athletics continued their winning streak by bowling over the Chicago White Sox, 14 to 7 in a hitting orgy that netted the A's 17 bingles, and the Yankees kept up their climbing act, winning their fourth in a row. Waite Hoyt was the pitcher who put over the Yank winning, downing the St. Louis Brownies, 4 to 1.

BROTHERHOOD WINS ITS FIRST LEAGUE GAME FROM C. C. OF A.

Pound Out 13 Hits But Nine Errors By Losers Aid Greatly In Score.

The Lutheran Brotherhood broke loose from their position in the cellar in the recreation ball loop Tuesday eve and defeated the C. C. of A. boys by the one sided score of 11 to 2.

The game is the first victory for the churchmen and the second loss to the straw-men having been defeated earlier in the week by the Grocers.

The game was featured with errors, two and three base-hits, pop outs, bases on balls, strike-outs and what have you.

The third inning, the church boys were able to average a run every inning, and during the fifth frame sent four boys across the plate.

Wolfe who was on the mound pitched a good game for the losers but had no support whatsoever. Over half of the runs can be accounted for because of the over-throws from the infield and outfield.

After the sixth inning when the straw-board boys were able to send another man across the rubber, they went the rest of the way through the contest failing to score another run, however, at various times runners would be stranded on the bases awaiting the chance to break lose for more runs, but that time never came as generally the teams would retire when the runner had a chance to score.

As a result of this game the Mid-west box and the Brotherhood will be lodged in a tie along with the Woodmen, Pettit's and Doggy Ward's.

Sherd Boyer and Art Steele umpired Tuesday's contest.

He leaves his wife, three sisters, two brothers, many relatives, and a host of friends.

Two of his neices, Bea and Adelaide Kreider made their home with him; Bea has made her home with him since she was three years of age, and Adelaide since the death of her father.

CARD OF THANKS

The family wishes to express their sincere thanks to the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted during the sickness and death of their loved one.

TO OUR DEPARTED MOTHER

Mother, you're gone but not forgotten
By the ones who loved you best;
We know that God to you has given
A home of eternal rest.

Tho sad we were and sorrowed greatly
As we stood beside your grave;
Beneath sorrow was consolation,
God His own, we knew did save.

Eyes of memory do not show you
Sleeping 'neath six feet of sod,
But instead we vision you clearly
Kneeling at the throne of God.

Within your eyes a light is shining,
For your life was not in vain;
Now you know that 'twas worth the struggle
A high place in Heav'n to gain.

May our parting be not forever-
May we meet again above,
Where God gathers His children to Him.
In His everlasting love!
